Using the Tariff tables

The Tariff tables contain the Tariff points for all the qualifications currently on the UCAS Tariff. They are arranged in three sections:

1. UK benchmark qualifications: The qualifications most frequently held by applicants from each of the UK countries. They are called 'benchmarks' because they are often used as a reference point by higher education providers when looking at less familiar qualifications.
2. Other UK qualifications: These are the bulk of qualifications on the Tariff, presented in alphabetical order. This section also includes historic UK qualifications which are no longer taught to students.
3. International qualifications: Qualifications awarded and regulated outside the UK that have been allocated Tariff points.

Some qualifications are families with a number of subject titles – for example, A levels, Scottish Highers, BTEC Nationals, and OCR Nationals. Others are single subject-specific qualifications, for example, the AAT Diploma in Accounting.

In most cases, the awarding organisation appears in the title of the qualification. However, in some cases there are multiple awarding organisations for a qualification or family of qualifications. Where this happens, the awarding organisations are listed below the table, for example, A levels and Foundation Art & Design.

In some cases, older qualifications have been, or are being, replaced by newer ones – we have indicated in the tables where this is the case.

Where qualifications are more commonly known by an informal title, we have used this as the heading and listed the official title below. For example, Advanced GCE is listed as A level in the tables.

A summary of the qualification's size and grade bands are given below each table. For more detailed technical information about how the Tariff points are calculated, please see the qualifications list available at www.ucas.com/advisers/guides-and-resources/information-new-ucas-tariff-advisers.

Annex D: The UCAS Tariff

This document sets out the points Qualifications Credit Framework (QCF) Level 3 and Scottish Credit and Qualifications Framework (SCQF) Level 6 qualifications attract under the Tariff.

Information about the rationale for the allocation of points to individual qualifications is detailed in a technical qualifications list, available at www.ucas.com/advisers/guides-and-resources/information-new-ucas-tariff-advisers.

This document is aimed at planners, and registry and admissions teams in universities and colleges. It is also aimed at teachers and advisers helping students to make choices about Level 3/SCQF Level 6 qualifications, and to prepare their applications for admission to HE.

It will also be of interest to qualifications regulators, awarding organisations, and other organisations that use the UCAS Tariff.

Background

The UCAS Tariff was first introduced in 2001, to help those working in admissions to make comparisons between qualifications. It was originally designed to compare very similar qualifications in terms of their preparation for broadly similar HE progression routes. However, since then, both the range of qualifications held by applicants, and the variety of progression routes into HE, has increased.

In 2012, UCAS completed a review of what information universities and colleges, students, and schools and advisers, need about qualifications to facilitate selection for admission to HE. The review identified a number of issues, including students' misunderstandings about how the Tariff is used in admissions, and the needs of admissions teams for more detailed, structured information about qualifications. In response, UCAS published new guidance for students and advisers on Tariff entry requirements and offers, and introduced Qualification Information Profiles (QIPs), which offer detailed information about qualifications to help admissions staff in considering students with vocational or non-UK qualifications.

The review also identified a number of issues with the effectiveness and sustainability of the Tariff. Specifically, concerns were raised about the inability of the methodology to accommodate common vocational or composite qualifications, anomalies with some point allocations, and the cost and complexity of the management process. In addition, it became apparent that the original Tariff could not easily accommodate some of the planned reforms to qualifications underway in the UK, and needed to respond to the growing demand from the HE sector for international qualifications to be included in the Tariff.

In response, the new Tariff was developed in partnership with representatives from the HE sector. It is the result of a substantial programme of modelling, testing, and evaluation which looked at a number of different options. UCAS also worked closely with qualification regulators and representatives from the secondary education sector. Our testing evaluated the potential impact of the Tariff on students, individual qualifications, admissions practice, and university league tables. Taking account of all the evidence from these assessments, we believe the solution is the one which best meets the needs of students and higher education providers.

Following a feedback exercise with the HE sector and secondary education community, in June 2014, the UCAS Board agreed the Tariff should be implemented from the 2017/18 academic year.

The Tariff

The Tariff operates as follows:

- Qualifications are allocated a size band of 1 to 4, based on their guided learning hours.
- Qualifications are also allocated a grade band of 3 to 14. These grade bands spread across the breadth of Level 3/SCQF Level 6.
- The size band and grade band are then multiplied to form the overall Tariff score.

It is important to emphasise that the methodology behind the Tariff is entirely different to the legacy version developed in 2001. This means points under the two systems are not comparable.

Using the Tariff for management information and reporting

The primary purpose of the Tariff is to provide a broad metric for qualifications at Level 3/SCQF Level 6, to support university and college management information needs. The Tariff is also derived by HESA on the data submitted by higher education providers for the 2017/18 student record onwards, and a summary report of full-time first degree entrants by Tariff bands, using this derivation, will be provided back to higher education providers during the collection process. To provide a comparison of the effect of the legacy and new Tariff, HESA has provided this summary report for the 2016/17, 2017/18, and 2018/19 student record collections.

Using the Tariff in admissions

While many universities and colleges use qualifications and grades, some universities and colleges use the Tariff in their admissions activities, principally to inform and describe entry requirements and offers. Where the Tariff is used, students can expect offers to include a mixture of Tariff points and qualification, subject, and/or grade conditions.

Universities and colleges are free to choose whether to use the Tariff, and how to deploy it. The introduction of the new Tariff did not alter this.

These Tariff points are used for applications submitted for the 2022 admissions cycle onwards (i.e. for students making applications from September 2021 for full-time courses starting from September 2022).

In line with good practice, it is recommended that admissions decisions should not be made based on Tariff points alone.

Which qualifications attract points?

Level 3/SCQF Level 6 only

The Tariff only contains qualifications at Level 3/SCQF Level 6 or equivalent. This means that, for example, it does not include Key Skills qualifications at Level 2 or 4. For EU qualifications, this is EQF Level 4 or equivalent – therefore, the Irish Leaving Certificate at Higher Level is included. The Department of Education and Skills in Ireland confirmed that grades A1 – C2 of the Irish Leaving Certificate at Ordinary Level represent a similar standard of achievement to QCF Level 3, and so are also included in the Tariff. For qualifications outside the EU, evidence is reviewed to make a judgement about their equivalence to this level.

Composite qualifications

In general, for composite qualifications, the Tariff allocates separate points to each separate constituent qualification, rather than the overall qualification. For example, for the International Baccalaureate (IB) Diploma, the Tariff allocates separate points to the Higher Level, Standard Level, Extended Essay, and Theory of Knowledge qualifications. There is no overall allocation to the whole IB Diploma.

The Tariff process

UCAS continued to consider qualifications for inclusion in the legacy Tariff until April 2015. The operation of the new Tariff, including the consideration of new qualifications for inclusion, started in September 2015.

The process for adding new qualifications to the Tariff is faster and more formulaic than the previous process. Using the application of a size by grade calculation, UCAS allocates Tariff points to qualifications using information accredited by the UK qualification regulators. UCAS seeks advice from the Qualifications Advisory Group, which is made up of admissions and education professionals, to ensure the allocation of Tariff points is appropriate.
